

Attend Agile Lean Europe conference in Berlin (7-9 Sep) for free!

The ALE 2011 Unconference is a European melting pot of Agile and Lean practitioners with many diverse perspectives and influences. It is intended as a cross-border, non-profit collaboration event for mutual learning and continuous improvement. Conference will take place 7-9 September in Berlin. Visit <http://ale2011.eu> for more information.

As a student volunteer you will be helping with various tasks during conference: preparing conference bags, registering speakers and attendees, helping speakers during sessions, guarding conference rooms etc. You will be asked work for about half of the conference.

In return for your work you will get to attend this event for free. You will learn about the newest ideas and techniques in Agile and Lean world. You will get to meet practitioners from throughout Europe and make friends with other volunteers. You will have a lot of fun!

Next steps:

- Visit <http://tinyurl.com/ale2011-student> and register as student volunteer.

The Agile Lean Europe (ALE) network is a Europe-wide open network for people passionate about Agile and Lean practice and thinking. It encourages people to share knowledge and experience. ALE fosters learning and continuous improvement of the network members and the people they relate to. ALE uses its European scope to bring different perspectives of different European cultures together. Learn more at <http://alenetwork.eu/>